Revised 2010
This outline is intended to provide a general overview of the existing construction law in Wyoming. It is important to note that much of the discussion from other state compendiums has either not been litigated in this state, or the existing interpretation is extremely limited. However, the issues that have been addressed by the Wyoming Supreme Court are outlined below. In addition, much of the law from Wyoming concerning construction has been decided in the contexts of mineral development, highway contracts and residential development.

Wyoming is a comparative fault state. Before the enactment of WYO. STAT. ANN. § 1-1-109 (2007), Wyoming’s comparative fault statute, contributory negligence, assumption of risk, and the obvious danger rule acted as a bar to recovery. “With the advent of comparative negligence legislation, however, these contributory negligence rules became a basis for an apportionment of fault and no longer operated as a complete bar to recovery. Thus, if appellant was negligent, it was for the jury to measure the relative degrees of fault.” Roberts v. Estate of Randall, 2002 WY 115, ¶ 18, 51 P.3d 204, 211 (Wyo. 2002) (citing Stephenson v. Pacific Power & Light Co., 779 P.2d 1169, 1179 (Wyo. 1989); Barnett v. Doyle, 622 P.2d 1349, 1361 (Wyo. 1981); Brittain v. Booth, 601 P.2d. 532, 534 (Wyo. 1979)).

I. Breach of Contract

Breach of contract cases in Wyoming generally involve either a contractor filing suit against a subcontractor, or a home buyer making a claim against the builder. This cause of action is governed by a ten year statute of limitations as indicated by WYO. STAT. ANN. § 1-1-107 (2007). The statute of limitations does not begin to run until the date of accrual or the completion of the project. Generally, before asserting a claim of this nature, one must complete his or her own obligations under the contract. Scherer v. Schuler Custom Homes Constr., 2004 WY 109, 98 P.3d 159 (Wyo. 2004). To properly interpret contracts, courts in Wyoming must read the contract and then decide on the true intent of the parties based on the unambiguous language of the contract.

A. Implied Covenant Of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

A breach of the implied covenant occurs when one party to the contract interferes or fails to cooperate in the other party’s performance. In Wyoming, this doctrine may not be used to create new, independent rights or duties beyond those agreed by the parties. It must arise from the language used in the contract, or be necessary to effectuate the parties’ intentions. The Wyoming Supreme Court stated the implied covenant “requires that neither party to a commercial contract act in a manner that would injure the rights of the other party to receive the benefit of the agreement.” City of Gilette v. Hladky Const., Inc., 2008 WY 134, ¶ 30, 196 P.3d 184, 196 (Wyo. 2008) (citing Scherer Con., LLC v. Hedquist Const., Inc., 2001 WY 23, ¶ 19, 18 P.3d 645, 654 (Wyo. 2001)). Furthermore, it requires the parties to act in accordance with their agreed purpose and each other’s justified expectations. City of Gillette, 2008 WY 134, ¶ 30,196 P.3d at 196.

In Wyoming it is possible to have a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing without breaching the express terms of the contract. The evidence must show that the party went beyond its contractual rights which amounted to self-dealing or breach of community standards of decency, fairness and reasonableness, in order to effectuate a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. City of Gillette, 2008 WY 134, ¶ 196 P.3d at 202.

II. Negligence

Much of the negligence law in Wyoming involving contractors has come from other contexts. In Wyoming negligence claims frequently arise when either a subcontractor or contractor is injured because of another company’s failure to maintain a safe working environment. Other Wyoming decisions involving negligence have come from design failure.

The elements of negligence claim are: “(1) The defendant owed the plaintiff a duty to conform to a specified standard of care, (2) the defendant breached the duty of care, (3) the defendant’s breach of the duty of care proximately caused injury to the plaintiff, and (4) the injury sustained by the plaintiff is compensable by money damages.” Hatton v. Energy Elec. Co., 2006 WY 151, ¶ 10, 148 P.3d 8, 13 (Wyo. 2006). The determination of whether a duty exists is a question of law. D&D Transp., Ltd. v. Interline Energy Servs., Inc., 2005 WY 86, ¶ 18, 117 P.3d 423, 429 (Wyo. 2005).

Establishing whether a duty existed towards the person, persons, or the entity injured is a deciding factor. A “[d]uty may arise by contract, statute, common law, ‘or when the relationship of the parties is such that the law imposes an obligation on the defendant to act reasonably for the protection of the plaintiff.’” Hatton, 2006 WY 151, ¶10 (citing Hamilton v. Natrona County Educ. Ass’n, 901 P.2d 381, 384 (Wyo. 1995)). Negligence actions also contain comparative fault as a mechanism for limiting liability or establishing the amount of fault between the actors under WYO. STAT. ANN. § 1-1-109 (2007).

III. Breach of Warranty

A claim for breach of warranty occurs when a plaintiff is not satisfied with the quality of workmanship contractually guaranteed by the contractor. The breach of warranty will be contained in the contract either expressly or impliedly in Wyoming.

Building or construction permits and contracts contain within them either an implied or express warranty that the work will be sufficient for a stated and known purpose and “will be performed in a skillful, careful, diligent, and workmanlike manner.” Matheson Drilling, Inc. v. Padova, 5 P.3d 810, 812 (Wyo. 2000) (citing Cline v. Sawyer, 600 P.2d 725, 732 (Wyo. 1979)).

Complete performance of a contract is proven by substantial performance of the contract. If minor defects exist at the time of complete performance, the defects will be corrected by the contractor at their expense. In Wyoming, a contractor cannot be held liable for damages caused by defects in the plans and specifications, as long as they

The Wyoming Supreme Court has outlined a contractor’s duty to include areas such as, the employment of skill and care in the selection of materials and performance of their work, completion of the job in a workmanlike manner and substantially complying with the owner’s plans and specifications. These duties continue even after the completion of the project. Lynch v. Norton Constr., 861 P.2d 1095, 1098 (Wyo. 1993) (citing Miller, 794 P.2d 91; Reiman Constr. Co. v. Jerry Hiller Co., 709 P.2d 1271 (Wyo. 1985)).

A cause of action for defective workmanship is available against a contractor either as breach of contract, negligence, or as individual actions in the same suit. Cline v. Sawyer, 600 P.2d 725, 732 (Wyo. 1979).

IV. Misrepresentation and Fraud

As a basis for misrepresentation and fraud, Wyoming has adopted the view presented in the Restatement of Torts (Second) § 552, which states: “[f]alse information supplied in the course of one’s business for the guidance of others in their business, failure to exercise reasonable care in obtaining or relating the information, and pecuniary loss resulting from justifiable reliance thereon.” Restatement of Torts (Second) § 552 (1977).

However, the Wyoming Supreme Court has held that § 552 will not be used as a method to avoid one’s obligations under a contract, nor will it provide a scapegoat for self-inflicted damages. In addition, “when the plaintiff has contracted to protect against economic liability caused by the negligence of the defendant, there is no claim under Restatement of Torts (Second), supra, § 552 for purely economic loss.” Rissler & McMurry Co. v. Sheridan Area Water Supply, 929 P.2d 1228, 1235 (Wyo. 1996). The case encourages parties to negotiate the terms and limits of liability in a contractual situation and holds parties to the terms of the contract.

V. Strict Liability

While strict liability has been adopted in Wyoming, it is extremely limited in its application and utilized primarily in the sale of equipment. In a suit alleging strict liability, the plaintiff must prove the product was defective when sold. This burden on the plaintiff may be difficult as defects with the product may not become known until after the fact. Wyoming courts have consistently ruled that strict liability does not apply in construction contracts since there are other alternatives for recovery. However, Wyoming has adopted the five elements necessary to a cause of action for strict liability as set forth in Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A (1965), and reiterated in Ogle v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 716 P.2d 334, 344 (Wyo. 1986):

1. That the sellers were engaged in the business of selling the product that caused the harm;
2. that the product was defective when sold;
3. that the product was unreasonably dangerous to the user or consumer;
(4) that the product was intended to and did reach the consumer without substantial change in the condition in which it was sold; and
(5) that the product caused physical harm to the plaintiff/consumer.

VI. Indemnity

Much of the case law in Wyoming has dealt with third-party beneficiary indemnity rather than express, implied, or comparative indemnity. There is no clear-cut explanation as to why there is limited case law on the other three. However, express and implied indemnity has been explained in various cases that were decided involving third-party beneficiary indemnity.

As a general rule, “[a] person who, in whole or in part, has discharged a duty which owed by him but which as between himself and another should have been discharged by the other, is entitled to indemnity from the other, unless the payor is barred by the wrongful nature of his conduct.” Schneider Nat., Inc. v. Holland Hitch Co., 843 P.2d 561, 572 (Wyo. 1992) (citing Restatement of Restitution § 76 (1937)).

“A pre-requisite to a claim for indemnity is the existence of an independent legal relationship under which the indemnitor owes a duty either in contract or tort to the indemnitee apart from the joint duty they owe to the injured party. The independent relationship may be established by an express indemnity agreement, indemnity implied from contract, or indemnity imposed by equitable considerations. Where there is an express indemnity provision, its parameters are derived from the specific language.” Diamond Surface, Inc. v. Cleveland, 963 P.2d 996, 1002 (Wyo. 1998) (citing Schneider Nat., Inc., 843 P.2d at 572-73).

In reaching the decision in Wyoming Johnson, Inc. v. Stag Indus, 662 P.2d 96, 99 (Wyo. 1983), the Wyoming Supreme Court stated the applicable law:

“A contract of indemnity purporting or claimed to relieve one from the consequence of his failure to exercise ordinary care must be strictly construed. Accordingly, it is frequently stated as the general rule that a contract of indemnity will not be construed to indemnify the indemnitee against losses resulting from his own negligent acts unless such intention is expressed in clear and unequivocal terms, or unless no other meaning can be ascribed to it. Mere general, broad, and seemingly all-inclusive language in the indemnifying agreement has been said not to be sufficient to impose liability for the indemnitee's own negligence. It has been so held, for instance, with regard to the words any and all liability.’ 41 Am. Jur. 2d, Indemnity, §15, pp. 669-70 (1968).

‘Where the injury was caused by the concurrent negligence of the indemnitor and the indemnitee, the courts have frequently read into contracts of indemnity exceptions for injuries caused in part by the indemnitee, although there is authority to the contrary. Even the fact that the contact requires the indemnitor to hold the indemnitee harmless from damage caused by the indemnitor’s ‘negligent acts and omissions’ has been held insufficient to make the indemnity clause applicable in a case where the indemnitee’s negligence concurred with that of the indemnitor to cause the injury.’ 41 Am. Jur. 2d, Indemnity, § 16, pp. 703-04 (1978).

Generally, contracts excusing one from the consequences of his own acts are looked upon with disfavor by the courts. Therefore, an agreement for indemnity is construed strictly against the indemnitee, especially when the indemnitee was the drafter of the instrument. If the indemnitee means to toss the loss upon the indemnitor for a fault in which he himself individually shares, he must express that purpose beyond any possibility of doubt. The test is whether the contract language specifically focuses attention on the fact that by the agreement the indemnitor was assuming liability for indemnitee's own negligence.”  Wyoming Johnson, Inc., 662 P.2d at 99.

A. Third-Party Indemnity

In actions for equitable implied indemnity premised on the negligent breach of a duty between the indemnitor and the indemnitee indemnity liability is allocated among the parties to the third-party claim proportionately to their comparative degree of fault. Schneider Nat. Inc., 843 P.2d at 578-79.

Under this modified or partial form of equitable implied indemnity, the distinctions of ‘active’ and ‘passive’ negligence are factors to be weighed by the jury in assessing the percentage of fault of the parties to the third-party claim. Typically, a jury would be instructed, in a third-party action, that if the third-party defendant is found to have performed certain acts or omissions constituting negligence for which indemnity is permitted as a matter of law and those acts or omissions contributed to cause the injuries and damage to the original plaintiff, then the third-party plaintiff should be awarded partial indemnity, which is stated in Restatement of Torts (Second), § 866B (2) (1979)[sic 886B (2)]. The partial indemnity award is a proportion of the total sum paid by the third-party plaintiff to the original plaintiff corresponding to the degree of fault of the third-party defendant.

Schneider Nat. Inc., 843 P.2d at 578-79.

To state a claim for equitable implied indemnity, the third-party plaintiff must prove: “(1) an independent relationship with the third-party defendant; (2) negligent breach by the third-party defendant of the duty created by the independent relationship; (3) under circumstances falling within the situations addressed in Restatement of Torts (Second) § 886B(2); and (4) that the breach of the duty to the third-party plaintiff contributed to cause the injuries and damage to the original plaintiff.” Schneider Nat. Inc., 843 P.2d at 572. Equitable implied indemnity actions under Restatement of Torts (Second), supra, at § 886B can be brought on theories of negligence, strict liability, or breach of warranty. The nature of the indemnity relief available will differ depending upon the theory of liability expressed. Schneider Nat., Inc., 843 P.2d at 575-579.

In other words, in order to fully apportion the ‘fault’ of an ‘actor’ who is a third-party defendant [the indemnitor] where each of these elements are present, the jury must consider the consequences arising from two separate claims: (1) the breach of duty of all the actors to the plaintiffs in the original suit, and (2) the breach of an independent duty to the third-party plaintiff [the indemnitee]. If a third-party claim is not allowed, the jury will not have an opportunity to determine whether the third-party defendant (the indemnitor) negligently breached a separate duty to the third-party plaintiff (the indemnitee), and whether that breach of duty is the source of some, or all, of the damages owed by the third-party plaintiff to the original plaintiffs. Consequently, unless the third-party claim is viable, a third-party defendant is unjustly enriched to the extent that its negligent performance of duties owed to the third-party plaintiff is not determined in the underlying action.

Diamond Surface Inc., 963 P.2d at 1003.

VII. Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations in Wyoming for any action based on contract is governed by WYO. STAT. ANN. § 1-3-105 (2007). It explicitly states that any action based on contract signed in writing shall be governed by a ten year statute of limitations, while any action based on an express or implied contract not in writing shall be an eight year statute of limitations.

It is important to note that contracts involving any governmental entity are governed by the Wyoming Governmental Claims Act. In accordance with WYO. STAT. ANN. 1-39-113(a), “[n]o action shall be brought under this act against a governmental entity unless the claim upon which the action is based is presented to the entity as an itemized statement in writing within two (2) years of the date of the alleged act, error or omission, except that a cause of action may be instituted not more than two (2) years after discovery of the alleged act, error or omission, if the claimant can establish that the alleged act, error or omission was: (i) Not reasonably discoverable within a two (2) year period; or (ii) The claimant failed to discover the alleged act, error or omission within the two (2) year period despite the exercise of due diligence.”

VIII. Economic Loss Doctrine

In Wyoming, the “economic loss” doctrine bars recovery in tort when a plaintiff claims purely economic damages unaccompanied by physical injury to a person or property. The purpose of the "economic loss” rule is to maintain the distinction between those claims properly brought under contract theory and those which fall within tort principles.” Rissler & McMurry Co. v. Sheridan Area Water Supply, 929 P.2d 1228, 1235(Wyo. 1996). The economic loss rule is founded on the theory that parties to a contract “allocate their risks by agreement and do not need the special protections of tort law to recover” damages caused by a breach of contract. Id. at 1235.

IX. Emotional Distress Claims

The Wyoming Supreme Court has permitted recovery for emotional distress as an element of damages in certain underlying actions. Examples of which include some intentional torts, violation of certain constitutional rights, and the breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing prior to 1997. Outside of these few instances, the Wyoming Supreme Court has adhered to the general idea that negligence permits recovery for personal injury or property damage, but usually will not result in liability for emotional distress.

In Blagrove v. JB Mechanical, Inc., 934 P.2d 1273, 1277 (Wyo. 1997), the Court adhered to the general rule, which precludes emotional distress damages in connection with property damage. The Court found the legislature never intended to abrogate the rule and thus permit emotional distress damages for property damage. Blagrove, 934 P.2d at 1277.

The Wyoming Supreme Court has adopted Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205 and held parties to a commercial contract may bring a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing based on a contract theory. A significant number of contracts in Wyoming already have a covenant of good faith imposed by statutory operation. All contracts coming under the ambit of the Uniform Commercial Code have an obligation of good faith imposed in performance or enforcement. Moreover, the Court has said that “it would be incongruous to allow a significant portion of commercial contracts in this state to be governed by an implied covenant of good faith while denying the same to all others.” Scherer Constr., LLC v. Hedquist Constr. Inc., 2001WY 23, ¶ 16, 18 P.3d 645, 655 (Wyo. 2001).
X. Delay Damages

Delay can be either established in the contract itself or within a reasonable amount of time after the signing of the contract. Where, as here, no time for performance is specified in a contract, the law implies performance must be within a reasonable time, and what is a reasonable time depends upon the circumstances of each case . . . What constitutes a reasonable time in any particular case is a question of fact.” G.C.I., Inc. v. Haught, 7 P.3d 906, 909 (Wyo. 2000). Delay damages may be specified in the contract or determined by the amount incurred to fix the breach of contract along with reasonable additional costs incurred.

In Brashear v. Richardson Constr., Inc., 10 P.3d 1115, 1118 (Wyo. 2000), the Wyoming Supreme Court stated “[l]iquidated damages can be drafted to apply whenever work is begun and a specific amount of time is allowed for the work to be completed.” The contract in this case provided for change orders and extensions of time. However, neither party used those remedies to alter the explicit terms of the contract when the deadline date passed.

In Frost Constr. Co. v. Lobo, Inc., 951 P.2d 390 (Wyo. 1998), the Wyoming Supreme Court allowed Frost Construction to recover the amount of damages suffered as a result of the delay from Lobo in not performing its obligations under the contract. The Court allowed damages for the costs associated therewith finding a different company to perform those obligations in addition to the other costs involved.

In City of Gillette v. Hladkey Const., LLC, 2008 WY 134, ¶¶ 44, 50, 196 P.3d 184, 201 (Wyo. 2008) the Wyoming Supreme Court held that a version of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) provision 8.3.1 is not an example of a “no damage for delay” clause. The provision states:

8.3.1 If the Contractor is delayed at any time in the commencement or progress of the Work by an act or neglect of the Owner or Architect, or of an employee of either ... or by changes ordered in the Work ... or other causes beyond the Contractor's control, ... then the Contract Time shall be extended by Change Order for such reasonable time as the Architect may determine.

The Supreme Court stated that parties may contract out of delay damages, but that this language was not specific enough to achieve that result. The Court instructed that the contract must clearly state what “sole and exclusive” remedies for a delay will be available. If the contract is not specific then other contract remedies will be available, including contract damages. City of Gillette, ¶ 50, 196 P.3d at 201.

XI. Damages

“While damages may not be calculable with absolute certainty, they should be susceptible of ascertainment within a reasonable degree of certainty and if there is evidence from which a reasonable estimate of money damages may be made that is sufficient, the primary objective being to determine the amount of loss, applying whatever rule is best suited to that purpose. Douglas Reservoirs Water Users Assoc. v. Cross, 569 P.2d 1280, 1284 (Wyo. 1977). "The proper measure of damages is the amount of the contractor’s extra costs directly attributable to the breach. Obviously, the preferable method for calculating such losses would be to itemize and total the cost of each piece of equipment or material and each man hour necessitated by the unanticipated conditions encountered in performing the contract. Such exactness is not always possible or necessary." Frost, 951 P.2d at 397.

The City of Gillette case also stated that while the total cost method of calculating damages is not preferred in Wyoming, it is available under certain circumstances. The total cost method compares the actual costs incurred, plus profit, to the bid amount and seeks the difference. It is disfavored because it attributes all responsibility to the owner without establishing a clear causal connection between the breach and the increased costs. The preferred method of calculating breach of contract damages is to itemize the extra costs directly caused by the breach. However, where such precise itemization is not possible, use of the total cost method is permissible if the breach substantially affected performance and the contractor proves the requisite elements. City of Gillette, ¶¶ 51-53, 196 P.3d at 202 (citing Frost, 951 P.2d at 400).

A. Direct

Damages as a result of the breach of contract are recoverable in Wyoming. Generally, the amount receivable from the breach will be the amount spent to correct the breach or finish the job minus the agreed upon contract amount. If the liquidated damages are easily identifiable, the courts will use that figure as the amount recoverable because of the breach.

B. Punitive

In Quin Blair Enters. v. Julien Constr. Co., 597 P.2d 945, 947 (Wyo. 1979), the Wyoming Supreme Court declared punitive damages are not recoverable as a result of breach of contract.

C. Attorney’s Fees

Attorney’s fees are recoverable in actions based on contract in Wyoming. Almost in every case requesting damages, if damages are awarded, the attorney fees will also be added onto the amount awarded for all damages. The attorney fees claimed have to be reasonable. City of Gillette, ¶ 51, 196 P.3d at 213.
The test for reasonableness of attorney’s fees was announced in Alexander v. Meduna, 2002 WY 83, ¶ 49, 47 P.3d 206, 221 (Wyo. 2002). In addition to following the American rule as to when attorney’s fees may be awarded, Wyoming also has adopted the two-factor federal lodestar test to determine the reasonableness of the award:

To determine the reasonableness of the attorneys' fees award, Wyoming employs the two-factor federal lodestar test. These factors are: (1) whether the fee charged represents the product of reasonable hours times a reasonable rate; and (2) whether other factors of discretionary application should be considered to adjust the fee either upward or downward. It follows there from that the trial court's determination concerning attorney’s fees is reviewed under an abuse of discretion standard.

D. Expert Witness Fees and Costs

Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 1-14-102 (2007) establishes the standard for expert witness fees and costs associated with having them testify. In civil cases, expert witnesses may be called to testify. If the court finds the witness qualifies as an expert and their testimony is admitted as evidence, the expert witness shall be allowed witness fees of twenty-five dollars per day or such amount as the court allows under the circumstances. Expert witness fees may also be charged as costs against any party or be apportioned among some or all parties by discretion of the court. Under § 1-14-102 (a)(iii) mileage is includable at the rate set in Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 9-3-103 (2007) for each mile actually and essentially traveled in going to and returning from where the trial is taking place.

XII. Insurance Claims

A. Occurrences That Trigger Coverage

Occurrence in CGL policies has been defined as an accident, which includes the continuous or repeated exposure to the same harmful conditions. Wyoming has defined the term “accident” as a “fortuitous circumstance, event, or happening, an event happening without any human agency, or if happening wholly or partly through human agency, an event which under the circumstances is unusual and unexpected by the person to whom it happens; an unusual, fortuitous, unexpected, unforeseen or unlooked for event, happening or occurrence; chance or contingency; fortune; mishap; some sudden and unexpected event taking place without expectation, upon the instant rather than something which continues, progresses or develops.” Reisig v. Union Ins. Co., 870 P.2d 1066, 1070 (Wyo. 1994) (citing Wright v.
Wyoming State Training Sch., 255 P.2d 211, 218 (Wyo. 1953). The term accident is included in many, if not all CGL policies.

B. Bodily Injury

Typically, CGL policies have defined bodily injury as meaning “bodily injury, sickness, or disease sustained by any person which occurs during the policy period, including death at any time resulting therefrom.” First Wyoming Bank v. Cont’l Ins. Co., 860 P.2d 1094, 1098 (Wyo. 1993).

C. Property Damage

Property damage in CGL policies means “(1) physical injury to or destruction of tangible property which occurs during the policy period, including the loss of use thereof at any time resulting there from, or (2) loss of use of tangible property which has not been physically injured or destroyed provided such loss of use is cause by an occurrence during the policy period.” First Wyoming Bank, 860 P.2d at1098-99.

D. Defective Workmanship

A Completed Operations Hazard policy can be obtained which “insures against liability for damages to person or property that occur after the operation is completed. This type of coverage differs from regular liability coverage for damages resulting on or off premises in that it insures against defective workmanship. A policy which excludes coverage on defective workmanship normally does so by specifying the exclusion.” Aetna Ins. Co. v. Lythgoe, 618 P.2d 1057, 1065 (Wyo. 1980).

XIII. Mechanic’s Liens

A. Notice

a. There have been several legislative changes to the statues listed in this section. Those changes become effective July 1, 2011. If you have questions about those changes please contact an attorney.

B. Introduction

A Mechanic's Lien is a claim against real property for work done or materials supplied for the property. Wyoming’s Mechanics’ Lien Laws can be found at WYO. STAT. ANN. § 29-1-101 through §29-8-109. Wyoming Law recognizes several different types of liens, Contractors/Materialman’s liens, Oil & Gas Liens, Agricultural liens, and other miscellaneous liens related to storage, attorney’s fees and irrigation liens. This treatise will focus on Contractors/Materialman’s liens as the most common type utilized in the construction area, but please be aware that if the work was done on an oil and gas property, on agricultural land or irrigation systems, different lien rights and procedures may apply.

C. Notice to Owner

The most important aspect of filing a claim for a Contractor’s lien is notice. If the notice requirements are not met, there will be no lien. The notice must also meet certain substantive criteria. Lien rights in Wyoming are statutory created and strict compliance with the statute is required to properly perfect a lien. There are several notice requirements contained within the Wyoming Statutes. First, if the property upon which the work is performed is a (1) existing single family dwelling unit; or (2) The property is a residence constructed by the owner or under a contract entered into by the owner prior to its occupancy as his primary residence; or (3) the property is a single-family, owner-occupied dwelling unit, including a residence constructed for occupancy as a primary residence, then a preliminary Notice must be provided. This section seeks to provide extra protection to projects which are to be a primary residence of an individual, and is not applicable to a developer or builder of multiple residences. If the property fits this description, then the contractor or subcontractor must provide to the Owner the following Notice within 30 days of first providing labor or materials on the project:

NOTICE TO OWNER

FAILURE OF THIS PRIME CONTRACTOR OR SUBCONTRACTOR TO PAY THOSE PERSONS SUPPLYING MATERIALS OR SERVICES TO COMPLETE THIS CONTRACT CAN RESULT IN THE FILING OF A MECHANIC'S LIEN ON THE PROPERTY WHICH IS THE SUBJECT OF THIS CONTRACT PURSUANT TO W.S. 29-2-101 THROUGH 29-2-111. TO AVOID THIS RESULT, WHEN PAYING FOR LABOR AND MATERIALS YOU MAY ASK THIS PRIME CONTRACTOR OR SUBCONTRACTOR FOR “LIEN WAIVERS” FROM ALL PERSONS SUPPLYING MATERIALS OR SERVICES FOR THE WORK DESCRIBED IN THIS CONTRACT. FAILURE TO SECURE LIEN WAIVERS MAY RESULT IN YOUR PAYING FOR LABOR AND MATERIALS TWICE.
D. Notice to Contractor

Subcontractors may also have an additional notice to provide to the general contractor. WYO. STAT. ANN. 29-2-111. If a general contractor posts a prominent sign at the worksite citing to WYO. STAT. ANN. § 29-2-111, then a subcontractor desiring to maintain his lien rights must provide the general contractor notice of his right to claim a lien, satisfying the following requirements:

(b) The notice of the right to claim a lien shall be given no later than sixty (60) days after the date on which services or materials are first furnished.

(c) The notice of the right to claim a lien shall be sent to the prime contractor by certified mail or delivered to and receipted by the prime contractor or his agent. Notice by certified mail is effective on the date the notice is mailed.

(d) The notice shall be in writing and shall state that it is a notice of a right to claim a lien against the buildings or improvements or upon the real estate for services or materials furnished. The notice shall be signed by the subcontractor or materialman and shall include the following information:
   (i) The subcontractor’s or Materialman’s name, address and phone number and the name of a contact person;
   (ii) The name and address of the subcontractor’s or Materialman’s vendor; and
   (iii) The type or description of materials or services to be provided

(e) This section shall apply only where the prime contractor’s contract is for fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) or more.

The failure of a subcontractor to provide this notice waives their lien rights, but only if the general contract also complies by posting the appropriate notice.

E. Notice of Intent to Lien

If the above notice is provided, or does not apply, and the work is performed but not paid, the next step for a contractor to secure his lien rights is to provide a “Notice of Intent to File Lien” pursuant to WYO. STAT. ANN. § 29-2-107. The Notice of Intent must be sent at least 10 days prior to filing a lien statement. If the work is being performed by a “Contractor” (a person or entity contracting directly with the “owner” for services or materials), the “Notice of Intent” must be sent 110 days after the last work or materials was last performed on the property. This is because the Lien Statement must be filed within 120 days after work was last performed, and the “Notice of Intent” must be provided 10 days prior. If the work was done by a subcontractor, (a person other than the contractor), then the “Notice of Intent” must be sent within 80 days of when work was last performed, and the Lien Statement filed within 90 days, allowing for the 10 day notice period. The “Notice of Intent” should be sent to the contractor or entity in contractual privity with the lien claimant, the legal owner of the real property, any mortgagees or prior lienholders, or any others with an interest in the property. Certified return receipt mailing is preferred, but not required. With respect to the timing of this “Notice of Intent”, the following definition of the date work was last performed will supply the trigger date:

(i) After the last day when work was performed or materials furnished under contract; or

(ii) From the date the work was substantially completed or substantial completion of the contract to furnish materials, whichever is earlier; or

(iii) With respect to an employee or subcontractor, after the last day he performed work at the direction of his employer or contractor.

F. Lien Statement

Once the property owner has been provided notice and there is still non-payment, the filing party may then commence the process of obtaining a lien on the subject property. It is important to know the County in which the property is located, to obtain a title opinion reciting all interest holders in the property and have an accurate legal description. To perfect a lien on the property, a “Lien Statement” sworn to in front of a notary public must be filed in the county real estate records in which the property is located. WYO. STAT. ANN. § 29-1-301. As described above, the Lien Statement must be filed within 120 days of last performing work for a contractor or 90 days for a subcontractor. The “Lien Statement” must contain the following information:

(i) The name and address of the person seeking to enforce the lien;

(ii) The amount claimed to be due and owing;

(iii) The name and address of the person against whose property the lien is filed;
(iv) An itemized list setting forth and describing materials delivered or work performed;

(v) The name of the person against whom the lien claim is made;

(vi) The date when labor was last performed or services were last rendered or the date when the project was substantially completed;

(vii) The legal description of the premises where the materials were furnished or upon which the work was performed; and

(viii) A copy of the contract, if available.

G. Complaint to Foreclose

Once filed with the County Real Estate Records, the Lien is effective and will endure for 180 days. If payment is not made during that time, prior to 180 days a Complaint to Foreclose the lien must be filed in the District Court for the county in which the real property is located. Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 29-2-109. The Complaint should allege a cause of action for foreclosure of the lien and sale of the property according to law, and could also include direct claims for breach of contract, unjust enrichment or other alternate claims as appropriate. The action will proceed as any other, and if successful the lien claimant could force a sale of the property by the Sheriff and collect and apply the proceeds to the debt and costs incurred. Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 29-2-103.
