

Running construction projects from coast to coast?

USLAW is there.

The construction industry has become dizzyingly complex. From contract documents to safety and hiring regulations to the threat of litigation, general contractors and subs can't afford to make a mistake when it comes to choosing legal counsel.

As construction companies grow into super-regional and national construction leaders, the demand for cross-jurisdictional legal teams has risen. Our members represent local, regional, national, and international construction companies, handling everything from claims against construction professionals to complex contract negotiations, construction litigation and risk management counseling.

From the bid and planning phase to the close of the project and beyond, construction companies around the U.S. count on USLAW.
